2. P) Truth is a strange thing because it can vary depending on the seeker and the purveyor.

Q) So it is with Sushant's untimely and tragic death.

R) But, it would not be wrong to say that he was a victim of the culture of high-speed celebrity where the first flush of success must be followed by adding multiple layers to one's brand endorsing products, running a business, owning a sports team, etc.

S) There are different truths about what brought matters to a head for him.

- 3) P) We knew the concept was experimental to try and see if it works.
- Q) That's what we wanted.
- R) The advent of the one-day game made it convenient for them.
- S) Many of us back then were trying to envisage how a Test match World Cup would be.

- 4) P) In pockets, where dry ration was distributed, it couldn't have fully compensated the needs of a child when the entire family was struggling for food.
- Q) As schools shut, so did mid-day meal programmes, which remain the primary source of nutrition for millions of children in India.
- R) The virus containment measures announced by the Modi government ended up disrupting food security programmes and nutrition delivery for women and children.
- S) The stresses of the pandemic are weakening an already weak health system.

5. P) The World Bank estimates that by 2050, 143 million people around the world will be forced to leave their homes to escape the effects of climate change.
- Q) Others will become refugees, crossing an international border in the hope of securing a better life.
- R) For hundreds of thousands of Somalis who have fled war, drought, and famine in their country during recent decades, a better life remains elusive.
- S) Some, such as Rahma and her family, will become IDPs, Internally Displaced People, with no clear alternative future.

6. P) Whether or not we find peace depends on what choice we make---a choice to act from love or a choice to act from fear.

Q) By default, we tend to act from fear, powered by our ego.

R) It is easier to carry on as we have been doing, from the ego and take the consequences.

S) Since we have invested a tremendous amount of time, effort and energy in building our ego, and since it has become our default state of action, to give up or destroy this ego, which to us means our very identity or existence, is a very expensive proposition.

8. P) Most of those bred within the industry are well groomed in the code of excessive deference, of acquiescence, and double-talk, which serves them well until they reach the critical mass of stardom.

Q) They are also tutored well on establishing and cementing their position as stars, even before they actually become one.

R) Those outsiders who achieve some amount of celebrity status and success are given a little pat on the back but not the real perks such as the fraternity support for their professional endeavours.

S) Outsiders are allowed into the hallowed circles only if they achieve the success that directly benefits the trade.

9. P) Our experience of working with district administrations and NGOs in my constituency in Assam shows that simple but innovative solutions go a long way to address nutrition concerns.
- Q) These gardens with local vegetables can sustain nutritional security of low-income households.
- R) Children and teachers were taught the importance of nutrition through customised learning tool kits.
- S) We helped set up 2,000 school nutrition gardens, where local vegetables are grown, and we worked with communities to create homestead gardens.

10. P) Another study came down on the side of mandatory mask-wearing by watching disease trends in Wuhan and New York City.
- Q) But some other researchers noted flaws in that study, published in the Proceeding of the National Academy of Sciences.
- R) Some experts wanted the study retracted.
- S) The one-to-two-week delay between infection and test results would suggest infections in New York City dropped well before masks were made mandatory.

11. P) However, before this, the role which Nehru played in the fifties was pivotal for the adoption of modern yoga practice within India".
- Q) Be it the 'Fit India' campaign or the Science and Technology of Yoga and Meditation (SATYAM) programme, government yoga initiatives were first envisioned by Nehru 70 years ago.
- R) As author Jerome Armstrong notes in his book Calcutta Yoga: "Prime Minister Modi has led a national push towards popularising yoga practice within India."
- S) Nehru's early initiatives really laid the groundwork for Modi's present yoga policy.
