1. (S1) The poster ranks high as a me-dium of publicity.

(P) Advertisement can be displayed before a much larger number of persons for a longer time by means of a poster than by the expenditure of the same amount of money in the Press, and it is, therefore, often found to be the better means of keeping them in the public eye.

S, R

(Q) Nor must it be forgotten that a newspaper is bought by the reader, and on that account en-joys an enhanced value; and further, that the purchaser usu-ally takes the paper home where it is perused by the whole household.

(R) It has, by reason of its size and the facilities which it affords for the use of colour, a very power-ful effect on the public mind.

→ poster

(S) It must, however, be remem-bered that the attention received by a newspaper is much closer and more intimate than that ac-corded to a poster.

(S6) If more is desired than the in-stantaneous impact on the mind. the advertising value of the post-er falls sharply.

When I think of my family's history on the land. I experience a pang of regret. Unlike much of the arid West, where the land has gone virtually unchanged for centuries, my place of origin, western Kansas, has been torn up ^{by} agriculture. The flat plains, excellent soil, and sparse but just adequate rainfall permitted farming; therefore farming prevailed, and a good 90% of the original sod prairie is gone. The consequence, in human terms, is that our relationship to our place has always felt primarily mercantile. We used the land and denied, or held at bay, its effect on us. Yet from my earliest childhood, when the most of the Kansas prairie was still intact, I've known that the land also had a romantic quality. I've felt moved by the expanse of it, enthralled by size. I take pride in my identity as a plains daughter.

16. Which of the following is the most accurate statement of the author's position?

- ~~(1) The presence of the people has enriched the plain's habitat.~~
- ~~(2) Farming has improved the soil of the plains.~~
- ~~(3) Farming has chemically polluted the plains.~~
- ~~(4) Farming has eroded the natural beauty of the plains.~~
