Passage

(For Qns 28 to 37)

Read the given passage carefully and answer the questions that follow. Some words may be highlighted to help you locate the same while answering.

Angola, one of Africa's leading oil producers, has faced a grim fiscal scenario in recent years, driven largely by declining global oil prices and internal structural challenges. Despite being resource-rich, the nation has found it difficult to diversify its economy away from petroleum dependence. With over 90% of export revenues tied to crude oil, Angola's economy remains highly vulnerable to fluctuations in the international energy market.

The government has taken several steps to stabilize its public finances, including subsidy cuts, debt restructuring, and seeking assistance from international institutions. Nevertheless, growth remains modest, and several key infrastructure projects have been put on hold as funds dry up. In the most recent budget, the finance ministry allocated increased funding to social services and food security, acknowledging the growing domestic need.

However, experts warn that unless Angola undertakes bold reforms in taxation and manufacturing, these allocations may not yield long-term gains.

Passage

One major concern is the country's growing public debt, which now hovers above 60% of its GDP. Servicing this debt takes up a significant portion of government expenditure, leaving little fiscal space for investment in education, healthcare, or industrial development. External borrowing has provided short-term relief, but repayment obligations threaten to stall progress on national development goals.

Adding to the complexity is the country's reliance on imports for basic goods, including food and medical supplies. This not only worsens the trade deficit but also places pressure on the local currency. Inflation, though slightly down from last year, continues to erode purchasing power, especially among low-income households.

President Joao Lourenco's administration has introduced initiatives to attract foreign investment and promote non-oil sectors such as agriculture and tourism. Yet, bureaucratic hurdles and infrastructure gaps persist, slowing the pace of implementation.

The business environment, though improving, remains fragile and subject to delays that often stall economic activity altogether.

As the nation charts its fiscal path forward, sustained policy discipline, structural reforms, and reduced oil dependency will be essential to restoring economic resilience and achieving equitable growth.

28. Which of the following can be inferred about Angola's dependence on oil?

- A. Angola's economic stability is closely linked to oil price trends.
- B. A large portion of Angola's foreign reserves comes from agriculture.
- C. The country has diversified its economy successfully.
- D. Oil contributes less than 50% to Angola's export revenue.
- E. Angola no longer relies on crude oil for its fiscal planning.

- 29. What can be inferred about Angola's future economic outlook if reforms are not implemented?
- A. Angola's GDP will triple in five years.
 - B. The country will overcome its fiscal crisis automatically.
 - C. The trade deficit will have no effect on the economy.
 - D. Angola will become a regional financial hub.
 - E. The debt burden may limit growth and development.

30. From the passage, which statement is most likely true regarding Angola's budget allocations?

- A. All budget funds are spent on defense and infrastructure.
- B. The finance ministry ignored social services.
- C. More funds were directed to sectors that address immediate public needs.
- D. The budget cuts were focused on agricultural exports.
- E. The ministry planned to eliminate debt using oil revenue.

31. What can be reasonably inferred about the effect of Angola's public debt on national development?

- A. It completely prevents foreign investment.
- B. It has made Angola self-sufficient in all sectors.
- C. It allows the country to spend freely on new industries.
- D. It limits Angola's ability to fund essential services.
- E. It has been entirely written off by international lenders.

32. Based on the passage, why is Angola's reliance on imports problematic?

- A. It causes overproduction in domestic sectors.
- B. It increases the value of the national currency.
- ☒ C. It widens the trade deficit and strains the economy.
- D. It leads to technological innovation.
- E. It helps Angola export more goods.

33. What inference can be made about the effect of bureaucratic hurdles on Angola's economy?

- A. They accelerate industrial reforms.
- B. They make it easier for foreign investors to enter the market.
- C. They help the government cut down debt.
- D. They slow down the implementation of economic initiatives.
- E. They reduce inflation significantly.

- 34. What does the passage suggest about Angola's policy direction under the current administration?
- A. It is focused only on oil exploration.
 - B. It encourages diversification and foreign investment.
 - C. It disregards the private sector's contribution.
 - D. It aims to increase imports from neighboring countries.
 - E. It favors rapid industrialization without planning.

A passage is given with five blanks in it. Each blank is represented by a letter. From the given options, choose the most suitable words to fill in these blanks so as to make the passage meaningful.

As cities continue to expand, urban planners are facing growing pressure to balance development with environmental sustainability. Rapid urbanisation often leads to the (A) _____ of green spaces, which play a vital role in maintaining ecological balance and improving air quality. Without thoughtful planning, city growth becomes synonymous with congestion, pollution, and a decline in the quality of life.

One major challenge is the tendency to prioritise short-term economic gains over long-term sustainability. Infrastructure projects that ignore environmental impact assessments may seem efficient at the moment, but they (B) _____ significant costs down the line, both financially and ecologically. In many cases, poorly planned development has led to increased flooding and heat islands due to the unchecked (C) _____ of concrete surfaces and loss of natural drainage systems.

To combat these issues, modern urban planning increasingly incorporates the concept of "resilient cities." These are urban areas designed not only to withstand climate change effects but also to (D) _____ social, economic, and environmental shocks. Building such cities requires a shift in mindset – from reactive to proactive planning – and greater (E) _____ between government bodies, architects, environmentalists, and the public.

Technology also plays a transformative role. Smart city tools, such as data analytics and IoT sensors, help urban planners make informed decisions. However, unless these tools are used inclusively and transparently, they risk becoming (F) _____ solutions that fail to address core human and environmental needs.
