Most economists in the United States seem captivated by the spell of the free market. Consequently, nothing seems good or normal that does not accord with the requirements of the free market. A price that is determined by the seller or, for that matter (for that matter: so far as that is concerned), established by anyone other than the aggregate of consumers seems pernicious. Accordingly, it requires a major act of will to think of price-fixing (the determination of prices by the seller) as both "normal" and having a valuable economic function. In fact, price-fixing is normal in all industrialised societies because the industrial system itself provides, as an effortless consequence of its own development, the price-fixing that it requires. Modern industrial planning requires and rewards great size. Hence, a comparatively small number of large firms will be competing for the same group of consumers. That each large firm will act with consideration of its own needs and thus avoid selling its products for more than its competitors charge is commonly recognised by advocates of free-market economic theories. But each large firm will also act with full consideration of the needs that it has in common with the other large firms competing for the same customers,

- 21. What does not seem as not good or normal in the context of this essay?
- (1) the new interest in free market
 - (2) being captivated by spell of the free market
 - (3) that which does not accord with the requirement of the free market
 - (4) the economists who are captivated by the free market

22. Who, according to the economists, are the right group of people to set the price of a commodity?

- ~~(1) the aggregate of consumers~~
- (2) the buyers
- (3) the sellers
- (4) the economists

23. Price-fixing is a phenomenon that is normal in

- (1) agricultural societies
- (2) industrialised societies
- (3) pre-industrial societies
- (4) globalised societies

24. A major act of will bring about price-fixing that will be seen as
- (1) effective and productive
 - (2) constructive and practical
 - (3) normal and having valuable economic function
 - (4) systematic and relevant

25. Selling a commodity at a price that is not more than that charged by competitors is

- (1) rejected by the free market system
- (2) opposed by the advocates of the free market theories
- (3) considered suspicious by the free market theorists
- (4) recognised by the advocates of the free market theories
