About Sue

Sue works as a speaker, writer, advocate, educator, and consultant. She is a National Ambassador for Alzheimer's Australia and co-chairs the Federal Dementia Forum.

Sue grew up in a family committed to constructive social change and community engagement.

Her father Bob was a former Prime Minister; her mother Hazel was a community worker, homemaker and advocate.

Observing life from such a rich and rather unique viewpoint, and lifelong participation in avenues of personal and social change, have formed the foundation of Sue's perspectives and her earthy ability to cut through to the heart of issues.
