Getting Hitched

Many a person has been hitched at Blawenburg Church...and many a horse, too! This old pipe in the side yard is still there today as a reminder of the days when horses and buggies and transportation. The last sheds were removed in 1959 to make way for Cook Hall, the building behind the church where the main source of travel along Georgetown-Franklin Turnpike. There were sheds on the church property for many years to accommodate parishioners (and their horses and buggies) in bad weather, but they were removed over time as cars became the predominate mode of transportation.
