• Israeli Attorney General indicts Netanyahu

Israel's Attorney General Avichai Mandelblit formally indicted Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu last Thursday for bribery, fraud and breach of trust in three separate corruption cases, affirming his preliminary decision from February this year. In a dramatic televised statement, the Attorney General said he was taking the decision with "a heavy heart but wholeheartedly," adding that "enforcement of the law is not optional" and that there were reasonable chances of conviction once the cases reached trial.

- Mandelblit rejected any accusations of political bias, saying it was "not a matter of right or left, or of politics" and that no other actor had influenced his decision. Incitement against the legal establishment was "dangerous and like playing with fire" and had to be "denounced and condemned," he said.
- Speaking shortly after Mandelblit in his own televised statement, Netanyahu continued to deny any wrongdoing and said the indictments were "an attempted coup against a sitting prime minister." Netanyahu called the investigations "contaminated and wrongful" and accused police investigators and state prosecutors of "outside considerations," "selective enforcement," and unlawful investigation practices, adding that Mandelblit had not withstood the pressure from these other actors.
- Netanyahu rejected any talk of resignation and vowed to continue leading the country "according to the law," demanding an external committee be formed to "investigate the investigators." "I won't let the lie win," he said.

- In “Case 1,000” Netanyahu is suspected of receiving illegal gifts from businessman Arnon Milchan worth up to £300,000 in return for acting in Milchan’s interest in a deal to sell an Israeli TV Channel (Channel 10) as well as helping him get a US visa, after Milchan’s was rescinded. Netanyahu is also alleged to have pursued a deal linked to Indian businessman Ratan Tata, who was Milchan’s business partner, and supported a law to extend tax breaks given to Israelis returning to live in the country after ten years (such as Milchan). Netanyahu is charged with fraud and breach of trust. Milchan has not been charged.
- In “Case 2,000” Netanyahu is accused of working with Yediot Ahronot owner Arnon “Noni” Mozes for better media coverage, by offering to restrict circulation of rival newspaper Israel Hayom, which is financed by US-based Netanyahu supporter Sheldon Adelson. The indictment said that Netanyahu and Mozes “recognised that the one had the ability to promote the other’s interest” in the run-up to the 2015 elections and discussed such possibilities. Netanyahu claims he was not serious about the agreement and never intended to implement the deal. Netanyahu is charged with fraud and breach of trust. Moses has been charged with bribery.
- In “Case 4,000” Netanyahu is suspected of promoting regulatory decisions that benefited Shaul Elovitch, the controlling shareholder in the Bezeq telecom giant, in exchange for positive coverage from the Elovitch-owned Walla news site. The indictment says the relationship between Netanyahu and Elovitch was “based on give and take,” and the Prime Minister’s actions benefiting Elovitch netted the businessman benefits to the tune of some NIS 1.8 billion ($500 million) in the period 2012-2017. In exchange, Elovitch’s Walla news site “published your political messages that you wished to convey to the public.” Netanyahu is charged with bribery, fraud and breach of trust. Elovitch is charged with bribery.

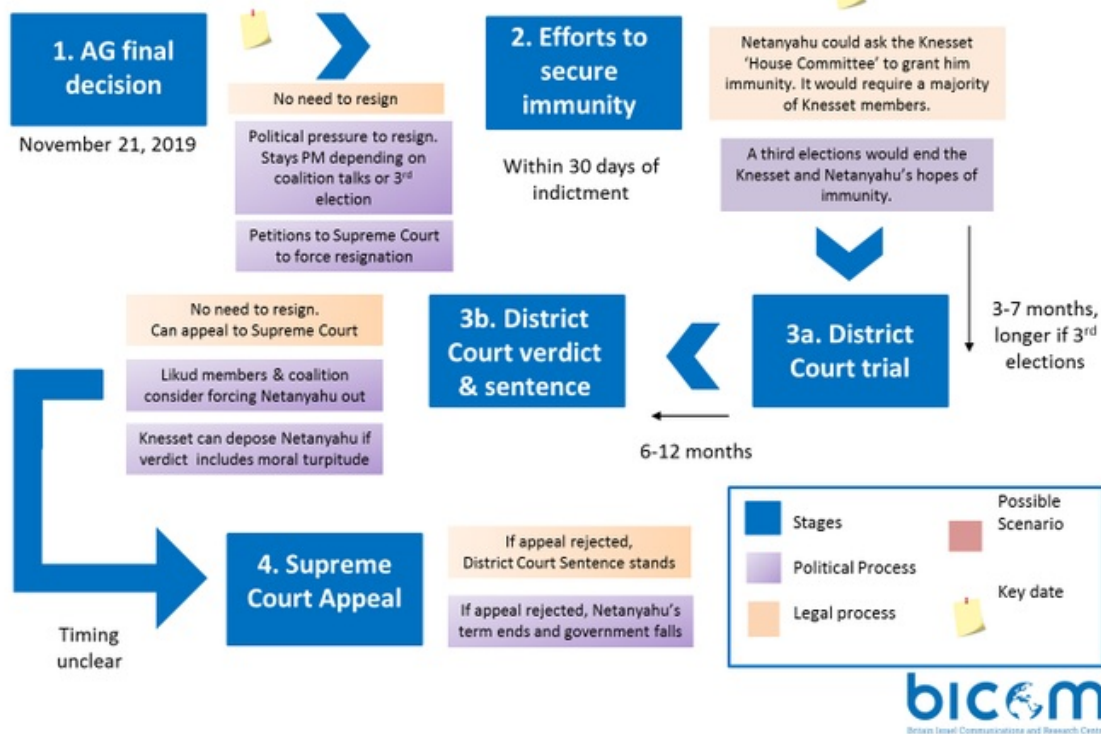

Senior Likud MK Gidon Saar openly challenged Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu’s leadership in an interview on Israel’s Channel 12 News on Saturday, saying the Prime Minister (and Likud leader) had no chance of forming a government even “after a third, fourth, fifth or sixth” election and called for snap primaries to be held in order to “avoid a third election” and save the Likud. Yet Saar stopped short of calling for Netanyahu to step down after his indictment for bribery, fraud and breach of trust last week.

Israeli media reported yesterday that Netanyahu had agreed to hold Likud leadership primaries “within six weeks.”

The Israeli Parliament has 16 days left to form a government before third elections are automatically triggered. The Likud primaries will likely be held after this period ends.

Comments by Prime Minister Netanyahu at yesterday’s cabinet meeting where he warned, “Iran’s aggression in our region, and against us, continues” and highlighted comments by General McKenzie, the head of US Central Command, that “Iran is planning more attacks.”

The Netanyahu indictment: what next?

Netanyahu's future will ultimately be determined by two separate but parallel processes, the legal and political.
