Network Reliability, Security, Simplicity are Critical Success Factors for Distributed Points of Care

Meaningful use of electronic health records (EHR) depends on access to highly available, low latency bandwidth

- As of 2017, nearly 9 in 10 (86%) office-based physicians had adopted EHR

Excessive time is spent on non-clinical, non-billable tasks

- 49.2% of a doctor's office day is spent on EHRs and desk work

Telemedicine expands revenue potential but needs a fast, smart and reliable network

- Cost reductions of 15-30% by shifting from hospital care to distributed home-based healthcare

Secure network connectivity is critical for compliance with HIPAA

- Healthcare data represents 1/3rd of potentially compromised records

Legacy networks are complex, costly and need skilled IT resources to provide digital patient care

Managed SD-WAN Ensures Seamless Patient Care Across Distributed Sites

Agile and secure connectivity for accessing patient records and cloud applications

Crystal clear voice and video quality for telehealth services

Always-on network for zero disruptions to patient care and staff productivity

Centrally cloud-managed network requiring no local IT skills

Enhanced confidential data security for HIPAA compliance
