Cannabidiol (CBD) is just one of more than the 60 components or active ingredients that belong to a class of molecules called phytocannabinoids that are found in cannabis, the plant that has been used as medicine for centuries. It is the most noteworthy natural cannabinoid and makes up to 40% of the plant.

Different from THC, CBD is a cannabinoid that has no psychoactive impact, allowing consumers to access the beneficial effects of cannabis without the euphoria.
